Chapter 13: Two Young Dragons

The children of Sung Su-Ho and grandchildren of Sung Jin-Woo, Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin, were entering their teenage years. However, unlike most children their age, they had already inherited the immense strength of their Divine Monarch bloodlines. Their powers were growing exponentially, and the world could feel the pressure of their burgeoning potential.

Raised in the shadow of their legendary grandfather, the Shadow Monarch, and their powerful father, the Dragon Monarch, they had been trained from a young age. Under the watchful eyes of the second clones of their parents, their training had been rigorous—designed not only to master their powers but to forge them into warriors capable of defending both their family and the Earth.

But now, the time had come for the young dragons to step into their destiny. As they reached their teenage years, their powers were beginning to manifest in more tangible forms, marking the beginning of their ascension into true Dragon Lords.

Sung Ye-Jun: The Dark Crimson Dragon

Sung Ye-Jun, the eldest of the two, was born with a dark crimson dragon heart—a rare and powerful artifact passed down from his grandfather, the Shadow Monarch. It wasn’t just any dragon heart, but one with an ancient, shadow-infused power that connected him to the dark forces of the Shadow Army. He was destined to inherit not only the legacy of the Dragon Monarch, but also the immense shadow powers of his grandfather.

At the peak of his transformation, Sung Ye-Jun stepped into the training grounds with the heart of a dragon burning within him. As his emotions swirled and his focus sharpened, his body began to glow with an intense crimson light, the ground shaking beneath him as his dragon form began to emerge.

With a roar that shook the heavens, Sung Ye-Jun's transformation was complete. His massive, dark crimson dragon form towered over everything in sight, his scales shimmering with a menacing yet majestic beauty. His wings, vast and powerful, were spread wide, casting a shadow that swallowed the training ground. He had become a true Dragon Lord.

His crimson eyes gleamed with the power of his dragon heart and the shadow monarch's essence that flowed within him. As he tested his new form, the ground trembled beneath his dragon's weight. He could now command shadows, summoning vast legions of shadow soldiers to fight for him.

Despite his immense power, Sung Ye-Jun knew that this was only the beginning. His training continued with a renewed intensity. He was tasked with raiding S-Rank gates and extracting shadow soldiers from defeated enemies, using his dragon abilities to devour their essence and turn them into part of his growing army.

Sung Ye-Rin: The Majestic Silver Dragon

Sung Ye-Rin, the younger sibling, was no less impressive. Born with a silver dragon heart, she inherited the regal and majestic qualities of the Dragon Monarch’s lineage, as well as a profound connection to the powers of light and creation. Unlike her brother's dark crimson power, Sung Ye-Rin was imbued with the pure and radiant energy of the silver dragon heart, which granted her unparalleled beauty and elegance.

When she transformed, the light around her flared brightly. Sung Ye-Rin’s body shimmered with silvery light, and in an instant, she had changed into a majestic silver dragon. Her scales, smooth and reflective, glimmered like moonlight, her wings delicate yet strong enough to tear through the air with ease. Her eyes, like polished silver, held a wisdom beyond her years. She exuded an air of calm, grace, and authority—a true Celestial Dragon.

Unlike her brother, who was focused on shadows and destruction, Sung Ye-Rin had the ability to heal and restore, as well as harness the powers of light. Her dragon’s breath could heal allies, cleanse the battlefield of poison, and banish the dark forces with a radiant light that could pierce even the deepest shadows.

In her training, Sung Ye-Rin was just as relentless as her brother, though she preferred to use her powers with a combination of elegance and precision. Like Sung Ye-Jun, she participated in the raids on S-Rank gates, but her focus was often on purging the darkness and healing the wounded. Yet she, too, had begun extracting shadow soldiers from fallen enemies, using her abilities to control and summon dragons from the defeated foes’ essences, increasing the size of her growing army.

Raid on the S-Rank Gates

Both Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin soon embarked on their first major task together: a raid on a particularly dangerous S-Rank gate that had been causing significant damage in a remote area. The gate, a rift to an unknown dimension, had been unleashing monstrous creatures and powerful Apostles. It was up to the young dragons to clear it.

As they approached the S-Rank gate, the very air crackled with energy, and a massive storm began to form around the entrance. The second clones watched from a distance, ensuring that their children were ready for the battle that awaited them.

Sung Ye-Jun was the first to charge, transforming into his dark crimson dragon form and unleashing a massive shadow breath that tore through the rift’s defense and swallowed the enemies inside. Sung Ye-Rin, ever graceful, took to the sky, her silver dragon wings cutting through the air with unmatched speed. She fired a beam of radiant light that vaporized several creatures and sealed parts of the gate, preventing reinforcements from coming through.

Together, they fought with the ferocity of true dragons. Sung Ye-Jun commanded his shadow soldiers, transforming them into dragons to fight alongside him. Sung Ye-Rin, on the other hand, summoned celestial dragons from the light of her dragon heart to aid her in the battle, each dragon blazing with pure energy.

The S-Rank gate finally collapsed after a fierce battle, with both young dragons taking part in extracting shadow soldiers from the fallen creatures. Sung Ye-Jun devoured their essence, converting them into shadow minions. Sung Ye-Rin, though not as inclined to darkness, used the light of her heart to purify and heal the battlefield.

The Path Ahead

With the successful raid on the S-Rank gate, the young dragons had proven themselves capable of handling missions of such magnitude. Yet their journey was far from over. They would continue to train, grow, and strengthen their powers, becoming ever more formidable as Dragon Lords.

The world would watch as Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin, two young dragons of immense potential, forged their path to greatness. They would lead armies, protect their family, and continue to defend Earth from threats, all while mastering the powers they had inherited from the Divine Triad.

But their greatest challenge lay ahead: for as they grew in strength, so too would the dangers that threatened their world.

This chapter marks a pivotal moment in the lives of Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin, as they embrace their dragonic heritage and step into their roles as protectors and warriors.
